Notes From Me to Madeleine, Wednesday, April 2nd

Noelle
Hi! So Looking through the site this is very much what I was looking for.
I really enjoy how the serif font at the bottom looks, but I think just for consistency I would prefer to restrict it to two typefaces, so the display font and the typewriter looking font. This is minor, but I think it would help the footnote even more feel like fully part of the webiste.
site*
I would also prefer some spacing within the paragraphs -- while the text width to line length reads well, I think some line breaks in the paragraph that feel natural instead of just having copy and pasted text from the article would have it feel less like a wall, especially in mobile view. (edited)
The color scheme is nice. I am very pleased with it. One thing I would like is for that off white background of the gif I sent you to be color picked, so that its hex code can be applied to the white display text and the page background. One off white instead of two types of white would make it feel very cohesive.
At the very bottom, I think I would like a condensed, small font width and line length duplicate of the navigation menu, like a sort of "done scrolling? here are some other pages)
but just as a string of text instead of a designed nav bar, something that looks like this(Gallery | Resources | etc)and each word is hyperlinked is there any way to have the nav bar freeze on screen and follow you as you scroll? (mostly on mobile, but I would like it on desktop too as it would feel very authentic to a tumblr blog) anyhow! that is all. I am very pleased with this direction.
thank you!

Madeleine

Hey Noelle! No worries. I looked over your notes and can definitely implement what you're looking for.Just a couple clarifying comments regarding some of your points:

- The serif font at the bottom in the footnote is already the same font as the body font, as I agree that two typefaces look much cleaner! Would you like me to change the footnote font to the display font instead to make it clearer that the site has only two typefaces?
- Do you still want me to use info from the preparing stencils Wiki page for the How To Print section? Or would you like to keep the video and current layout I have so far?
- Regarding the nav bar, I can definitely make the bar freeze for both mobile and desktop using fixed positioning :)

I'll begin to implement the edits now! Thanks for the helpful directions.

Hi Madeleine,

Sorry, this message snuck past me.
As for your first message, I was referring to Mockup B as compared to Mockup A, which has a different text font than in the footnote. That being said, I actually prefer Mockup A. One thing I will note is that on the nav bar, I would like the word 'mimeograph' to have the same distressed look as the other titles throughout.

2. I would like you to keep it.
3. Great!

Sorry for the delay.
